EDITOR'S NEWS & VIEWS

by DAVE FAIRCHILD

One of our most distinctive human needs and desires is the challenge of the human spirit. We have a need and an ability to transcend our physical limitations and challenge the world. We are not content simply to exist, we question our existence and confront our destiny. We delight in daring ourselves to become better than we are. We can and do meet this challenge of the human spirit in many contexts, but one of the most common and visible is the world of sports, sports is perhaps even analogous to life itself. We discover ourselves, in sport and in life, in discovering our inner limits, in discovering what we are not, and perhaps never can be. Sport portrays in brief shining moments the highest ideals of dedicated striving and heroic accomplishment. Sport provides an opportunity to witness and participate in human excellence.

The athlete's world can be understood as a medium toward which and through which man is actively involved and committed and where he discovers and constructs significance for his life as he chooses and encounters his possibilities. As an existentially engaged being in the world, man becomes involved in a situation in which he is working toward a specific possibility within the world. Man is able to encounter his fundamental being, the essence of his existence, through a world in which he has become actively involved with a chosen possibility. There is of course no single "real" world shared by all of us. Rather, there are many worlds which each of us structures, lives through, and understands by our individual involvement in and projection toward some future possibility. These worlds are personal, often intensely so, self-created, and experientially based. As a result, any individual exists in several worlds simultaneously, for example, religious, family job, hobby. There is usually considerable overlap among these worlds, and they are not easily separable in the course of daily living, but they are distinguishable, especially for purposes of discussions and understanding.

Our interest is in the sport world. A sport experience affords an individual the opportunity to choose and actively seek that self-chosen goal. For this reason the sport experience is a situation in which an individual can construct and discover personal significance through his or her involvement in and commitment to individually chosen possibilities. It is noteworthy that an athlete makes a commitment to a particular goal, not just to a general goal, or to goal per se. This commitment requires a willingness to prepare optimally for the encounter, through training sufficient to make the goal a possibility, the development of recognized expertise, and through the sacrifice of time and often other activities as well, to become all we are capable of becoming.

This sporting commitment does not require a specific level of skill. The commitment does require one to do and be the best of whatever he or she is able to do or be; it demands the utmost effort and involves the utmost reaches of the individual's being at any level of skill, a commitment to the utmost effort requires a corresponding desire. Desire is the condition under which the athlete constructs and designs his or her own short world through the optimal use of raw material developed during the training and practice sessions. It is desire that forces man to attempt to actualize the most idealistic of his possibilities.

The challenge of the human spirit often manifests itself in a general need to know. This need to know results in man seeking out a formal mode in and through which to measure himself. Through testing himself and his individual limits, man begins to satisfy the need to test the limits of human ability. The sport encounter becomes the means through which man can organize his actions and measure himself against his future goal. Through the action, by acting upon choices and entering into the sport forum, the sport world is completed. As a pursuit of self, as an opportunity for self-actualization, actions in the sport world are only the first step. For man to become all that he can be, he must act in an effort to turn his future possibility into a present reality. The significant feature in this understanding is that within this self designed sport world the athlete's commitment, desire, and action create a world in which man finds himself alone to construct his own meaning for life. The construction of meaning for an individual necessarily involves being along, by oneself. In a sense, it is a oneness, a singularity, in which man can meet and discover himself. Within this world, man discovers that he must decide the meaning of his world and his essence, like Sisyphus, "alone, unjustifiable, and without excuse."

As we rise to meet the challenge of the human spirit, we discover that the heart of human reality is courage, honesty, freedom, commitment, and excellence. The heart of human reality is sport.

President's Column

by LARRY LEE

This is my farewell address as president; our club's new officers for 1982-1983 took over leadership after the October 17th elections. Congratulations to John Treleaven, incoming president; Don Goldner, carry-over vice president; Marsha Schmidt, secretary; and Terry Shipley, treasurer. This dynamic quartet will be selecting a new board of directors very soon. Under their guidance the prospects for next year are bright indeed.

Before we close the books on 1982, let's pause to survey some of its trends and high points. On the competitive racing scene, this past twelve months might be viewed as the Year of the Female Runners in the FWTC. The year before was the "break-through" for our ladies, but this past year was noteworthy in the even more substantial improvement by and increased competitiveness among an ever-growing contingent of females. The leader of the pack: Betty Hite, and what a phenomenal year she had! Mary Connelly, Theresa Ehrman, and Ann Jamison had exceptionally strong racing seasons.

In the men's division, 1981-1982 was punctuated by last winter's duels between Tom Loucks and Craig Schwartz, followed by the emergence of Loucks and Rick Reitzug as tops in the shorter/middle and longer distances, respectively. Now Greg Orman has dashed to the forefront after his recent graduation from college and appears to be the power to be reckoned with for years to come - at any distances.

The consistency of Mike Bultemeier, Jerry Williams, Jr., Dan Kaufman, and Jerry Mazock deserve special mention. Joe Barile's cominance in the 45 and older crowd and the continuation of the spirited Myron Meyer-Mike Kast rivalry in the 50 and over class have been top stories of this past year as well. The emergence of Mike Beltz, Mike Robbins, Phil Miller, Dave Fairchild, Terry Shipley and a handful or so others who quietly, without fanfare, have made quantum leaps forward in '82 - this is the larger story behind the Loucks-Reitzug-Orman headlines.

What were the best individual FWTC performances this past year? With the Home Loan 10,000 and the Ultra-Marathons not yet run as of this writing, Greg Orman's 45:20 winning effort at the Blueberry Stomp 15K has to take top honors. A close second is Phil Suelzer's 6:08:51 in last year's 50-mile ultra (7:22 per mile pace), probably the most remarkable achievement in a FWTC race. Pick any of Betty Hite's better races in decent weather, and Tom Loucks' 30:57 at the Indianapolis Regional Pepsi Challenge 10K for honorable mention. Incidentally, Betty is currently on a roll, having run three straight PRs leading up to the Home Loan 10,000. It's somewhat mind-boggling to contemplate how far this talented late-bloomer could go in the next few years.

On the club administration level, 1981-1982 was also a very solid span of achievement. I personally want to thank Don Goldner, VP; Gloria Nycum, secretary; and Don Lindley, treasurer; as our other elected outgoing officers for their total dedication to their jobs and to the entire board for a year-long commitment to serving the best interests of the FWTC. I reflect almost in awe at the near-perfect attendance at all board meetings, and even more so at the collective sound judgment, mature perspective, vision, and selflessness of this group as evidenced in our "round table discussions", and in the numerous written and verbal after-meeting observations and suggestions shared with me as president.

We FWTC members can take pride in the sheer cerebral talent tempered with common sense used in our best interest by our club's leaders this year.

The major accomplishments of the club this year in review:

1. Continued membership vitality, financial soundness, and strict fiscal responsibility. Thank Don Lindley, Phil Shafer, Terry Shipley, and Chuck DeVault especially for their roles here.

2. A well-planned, well-run 19 event race program. Kudos to John Treleaven, Terry Shipley, Don Lindley, every race director, and everyone who volunteered their time and their talent behind the scenes to assure quality races 19 times out of 19. A special salute to our many corporate race sponsors for their support, too. Our TV-33/Hooks Marathon and Home Loan 10,000 continue to qualify as two of the very best, most popular races in Indiana. Certainly the NAVL 15K is as well-organized a race as any, and our Ultra in 1981 may have been our race "success" story of the year.

3. The all-out commitment to help one of our own members in tire of deepest need. Our rallying to aid brother Kent Davis, culminated by our successful Kent Davis Benefit Run, revealed the heart and soul of the FWTC. Our board was so gratified by this experience and the memory of our Rick Harmon 24 Hour Marathon Benefit in 1980 that we have voted to stage an annual benefit run to raise funds for some worthy cause relating to us as runners in this community.

4. The selection of our own Don Lindley as recipient of the Road Runners Club of America (RRCA) Rod Steele Memorial Award, given annually to the outstanding RRCA club worker in the country.

5. The superb quality and popularity of our monthly publication and voice of the FWTC, THE INSIDE TRACK. Dave and Jan Fairchild, editors, have brought new standards of excellence to our periodical and rendered it clearly worthy of national recognition. Hats off to Tom Loucks, Mrs. Loucks, Jim Dupont and his Harding High students, and Chuck DeVault, for their year-long invaluable assistance. Also to all those who cared enough to write stories, articles, columns, or to submit pictures or race results, or who worked anonymously to compile, collate, and address-label each issue.

6. Establishment of a Junior Olympic track program to promote distance running among our local youngsters 18 and under.

7. Establishment of a wheelchair division in every FWTC race where wheelchair participation is logistically possible.

These seven high points represent tangible, readily visible accomplishments. What may be just as significant to the development of the FWTC are these policies, guidelines, or philosophies, for they help define our club's very essence:

For the first time in our five year history we have recorded and published in THE INSIDE TRACK guidelines pertaining to necessary criteria for all FWTC-sponsored races, points races, corporate sponsorship of races, points standings computation, wheelchair division racing procedure, postponement of races due to the weather or other factors, and editorial guidelines for THE INSIDE TRACK.

On the organizational level, we have for the first time set up a detailed process for the election of officers, creation of an executive council, selection of a board of directors whose members have specific areas of responsibilities, the development of committees composed of non-board members, and a periodic audit of the treasury. The enormous workload of the club should now be more easily and widely distributed; board members should be less likely to "burn out"; new faces will get directly involved in club administration and naturally aspire, in some cases, to board position; and the board will thus become less self-perpetrating, a dangerous phenomenon that frankly has plagued the club in past years and should be discouraged.

Most importantly, we have continuously and with conviction espoused a position of openness to suggestion and constructive criticism - about every facet of our club and its activities,

We have consciously and deliberately taken steps to make certain we have a good "read" on the wants and needs of our roughly 700 paid members. We have avoided the common pitfall of appealing only to the athletically-gifted, highly competitive, hard-core male runner. We have recognized an obligation to serve not only our existing constituency but also those outside our club who could benefit from membership and therefore should be among our constituency.

High-sounding verbiage? No, the mainstreaming of our wheelchair athletes, the strong support of our female division, the sincere encouragement of our members, current and prospective, with limited potential, and the creation just in October, 1982, of our youth distance racing program testify to both our sensitivity and our commitment to looking beyond our own needs. The real success stories of the Fort Wayne Track Club in 1981-1982 may have been Loucks, Reitzug, and Hite - or they may have been Bob and Sharon Pauley, Jeannie Hormann, Ken Votaw, Tom Humbrecht, Tracy Sohaski, Andy Cauffman, Jor Brooks - or you if the club made you a happier, healthier, more positive-thinking person who learned more about what makes him tick through running. That just might include all of us!

I am proud to be part of an organization that has such a profound beneficial impact on so many good people. Thank you for your cooperation and the chance to give back to you a little in return for all that I have gained from your friendship and fellowship in the Fort Wayne Track Club.

Fellow Runners:

This is a short letter to express my appreciation and gratitude for the support you have given me and my family. I don't have the ability to put into the correct words the feelings that I have to thank you all properly. I am very proud to be a member of such a personal professional track club. After my return to Fort Wayne, I am looking forward to participate with the track club in every capacity that I am able.

From the letters and phone calls I have received I am so delighted that the benefit race was wonderful for everyone. I would like to thank all the runners and people of Fort Wayne for their caring and participation. Also I want to express my thanks to everyone who helped with the organization of the race for their extra time expended.

I am now participating in a new physical therapy program at the University of Arizona. At this time I am walking and jogging two miles. After the two mile workout I ride the stationary bike for twenty minutes. It feels so good to be able to exercise and work up a sweat!!

I was released from the hospital August 24th. The doctors are pleased with my progress and hopefully it will continue in that manner. If my condition stays stable with no interference with infections or viruses, I will be able to return to Indiana in December before Christmas. Let's keep our fingers crossed! Once again I would like to thank every one for their support and concern.

Everyone stay healthy and have fun.

RUN, JANE, RUN

September 26, 1982

More than 100 women and girls turned out on a chilly September 26th morning for the 2nd annual Run, Jane, Run 5K. The 5K is part of Run, Jane, Run: Women in Sports Weekend, a benefit for the Fort Wayne Women's Bureau, co-sponsored by WMEE 97 FM.

With 106 finishers (many of them Fort Wayne Track Club members), the run was very successful! This success is due in part to the contribution of FWTC, and I'd like to thank the people who helped make it possible.

Thanks to Larry Lee, with whom I made the initial contact. His cooperation and enthusiasm for women runners and the Women's Bureau, made it a real pleasure to work with the Track Club.

Thanks to Terry Shipley for his help with the timing equipment, and to Don Lindley for providing the finish line equipment. A big thank you to FWTC Jim Heymann for assisting at the run, and finally, to the women members who supported Run, Jane, Run by entering the 5K. Hope to see the same Track Club faces (and many new ones) next year at the 3rd annual Run, Jane, Run: Women in Sports Weekend. - s/Kath Stachowski

REFLECTIONS
Angie Severs

Now that the days grow short and cool, and my regular runs are witness to the beauty in the change of the seasons, I find myself reflecting on the races of the summer. Reading over my journal and adding up miles, it seems my times are a little faster than last year (my first), yet so far from where I might be or might like to be. This first full year has been an incredible learning experience for me. I have learned that running is a life long, day to day habit just like eating properly or brushing teeth. It is not a seasonal sport to be endeavored only in the heat and humidity of the summer months (my favorite race last year was the cross country race, at Quabache State Recreational Area in November, it was cool). Being a wife and mother of two preschoolers, time became a problem over the winter as my husband's schedule was busy and running was easily dropped as a priority. Even though I ran occasionally it was not sufficient to maintain my fitness. This winter I will make time, I'll run whenever it can be. A very hard lesson learned when I hit the roads in earnest in mid-April.

I've learned from other runners that my problems in running are not singular to this back of the packer but common to the better runners as well. Slumps always pass in time in spite of the seemingly endless bad runs they cause. The camaraderie among runners is such a blessing. How many times a fellow runner, usually a track club member, saved a run by running with me a while.

uttering a word of encouragement in passing. Elite or back of the packer there is a very special understanding and compassion among runners that set us apart from other groups. In fact, I would recommend attending races even if you don't run, just for the privilege of sharing this camaraderie.)

I have learned that running is accomplished as much in the mind as in the legs. Unfortunately, my legs are much stronger than my mind and I have come to realize that I must push myself through the weak will to run better. A really fortunate aspect of this perspective is my running partner, Karen Pedden. She has the strong mind I need to allow my legs to do their best. She pushes me, without pushing, and sets the perfect positive example without lecturing, and when I am run alone I find myself pushing harder and longer with a greater effort or pain. Running is all in the mind.

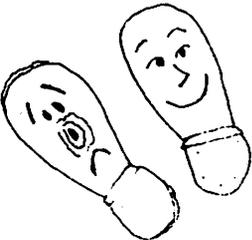

Perhaps though the most important lesson I have learned is one taught me by a dear friend, Billy, who helped me get started. Last summer I would feel the need to walk occasionally and it depressed me since it felt like such a sign of weakness and failure, but Billy would tell me "Don't worry, no one is going to take your shoes away." This is applicable to much of running. Whether I run a seven minute or ten minute pace, or two miles or 20 miles, or race or don't race, the most important lesson I've learned is to run and remember that I have the rest of my life to run better, faster, and longer. No one is going to take my shoes away.

HEAT EXHAUSTION - A PERSONAL EXPERIENCE - Tom Finan

Terry Coonan, Paul Gilley, and I decided to run the 25K race at a 7:45 pace. This did not seem unreasonable since we had run the 15K Blueberry Stomp on Monday at about a 7:10 pace. We started the run, Paul remarked the pace seemed a bit fast and I agreed. We passed the first mile mark at 7:02. We slowed some and went by two at 14:36. Terry mentioned we'd better not lose too much time on the flat because the hills were still ahead. Somewhere between 2 and 5 Terry pulled away. Paul and I went by 5 at 37:38. We downed two glasses of water at the aid station.

As we began the next mile, Paul said, "It feels like a comfortable pace." I grunted, "yes" as I followed behind about two or three yards, but deep down it really didn't feel comfortable. My troubles had begun. Somewhere we made a left turn and the breeze that had been in our faces had disappeared and we were now running in a blast furnace. Our pace had slowed as we heard the timer yell 78:19 at ten miles. As we waded through the aid station I drank two glasses much more slowly. I was not very eager to begin running again.

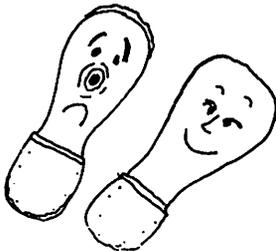

Shortly after again starting out, I could see I was holding Paul back and encouraged him to go on ahead. He steadily pulled away. Just before I arrived at eleven miles, someone on a bicycle shouted the next aid station was about a mile ahead. Well the next two miles to the aid station were pure agony. I struggled on the hills just barely lifting my feet off the ground, sometimes stumbling near the top. I thought about waling up the hills but figured if I did I never would finish the run. Phil Suelzer riding a bicycle (not the same one mentioned earlier) called to Phyllis just 3-1/2 miles to go. No need to look at the watch. My concern now was just to finish. The final aid station was a welcome sight and another chance to walk. I walked to the bottom of the hill while consuming two full cups.

I broke into a slow trot feeling somewhat disoriented. Shortly, my arms were tingling and my face hurt from the strain. I tried several times to relax my face but the relief lasted only a few seconds. I never saw another mile marker. I had been running one hour fifty-seven minutes before starting to walk. At this point I could not have passed a sobriety test as I weaved along the road. As I approached the finish line, someone called my name and said, "Only 100 yards to go..." With that encouragement I was able to jog in and take my ticket.

Terry and Paul were waiting for me and Terry asked my time. I caught 2:16:21 on the clock and told him so. I had slurred the numbers so badly he had to have me repeat them. Terry brought me ice water which was gulped in two swallows. Don Lindley asked if #98 would please turn in his ticket. I stumbled forward and mumbled "I'm 98 but I don't think I can fill it out right now". Don asked if I was okay and suggested I get into the shade while Terry filled out my ticket.

The tingling was worse, my walk was a stagger and it was difficult to speak plainly. I did not know it yet but I was suffering from heat exhaustion. I had over extended myself. Even though I had consumed over 48 oz. of water before and during the race, my body had used that plus my reserves and my cooling system was no longer working.

I staggered over to a wall and sat down. Terry and Alma kept the water coming. I drank as Mr. Ojeda poured water on my head and shoulders. After several minutes I was not responding. Someone brought over the doctor who decided I needed some help. They helped me lay down in the grass and began giving me oxygen and rubbing me down with ice. I consumed many cups of Pepsi as they continually poured water over me and checked my blood pressure. I'm guessing it took at least an hour of this treatment before I began finally feeling normal.

I learned an important lesson. You don't have to be a front runner to suffer from heat exhaustion. They say listen to your body. Mine cried out to me for ten miles but I refused to listen. I've now decided to make sure that I hear what my body is saying before every race.

I want to thank all of those people who were concerned and helped bring me back to normal. I would have been in big trouble without their help. Thank you Dr. Granam, the E.M.T.'s from Allen County React, Joe Barile, Woody Barker, Herb Chandler, Terry Coonan, Larry Lee, Don Lindley, Alma Ojeda, Mr. Ojeda, Jerry Perkins, John Treleven, Joe Ziegler, and the many others who assisted.

1983 POINTS CALCULATIONS

Drafted July 17, 1982

Mike Robbins

I believe changes can be made in the points system to greatly simplify the calculations and reduce the compilation time necessary to maintain the points. I think that the system utilized by the Hoosier Road Runners can generally serve our purposes.

Basically, rather than attempting to assign points to all members in each race, a cut-off number is used. The Hoosier Road Runners consider only the top 25 finishers in each age division regardless of affiliation. Points are assigned on the basis of first place, 60 points; second place, 54 points; third place, 50 points; fourth place, 47 points; fifth place, 46 points, . . . twenty-fifth place 26 points.

I propose the following be adopted for the 1983 FWTC points standings:

1. All runners who wish to be considered in the points standings must declare that intention in writing prior to the first 1983 points race or the first race a new member is eligible to run (form to be printed in December, 1982, THE ISSIDE TRACK with a periodic note to contact points statistician for any further information).
2. Only the top fifty (50) finishers in each male age division and first thirty (30) finishers in each female age division will be considered regardless of club affiliation (the same numbers will also be applied to the overall categories). Thus, if a FWTC member finished second in an age category, 54 points would be assigned regardless of whether the first runner was a FWTC member.

3. Points will be assigned on the 60-54-50-47 basis followed by the HRRC.

4. All current age categories will be maintained. All race directors will continue to be responsible for reporting results on this basis.

5. Points will be accumulated in the age division in which the runner participated in each race. The runner will be placed in the age division in which he/she participated in one-half or more races during the year (if an equal number of races were run in two age divisions, the older age will be used). The following example illustrates how points would be considered for a runner who ran four races during 1983 in the 35-39 age group and four races in the 40-44 age group:

|-----------------|---|----|
| Race #1 (35-39) | - | 30 |
| #2 (35-39) | - | 40 |
| #3 (35-39) | - | 50 |
| #4 (35-39) | - | 46 |
| #5 (40-44) | - | 40 |
| #6 (40-44) | - | 54 |
| #7 (40-44) | - | 46 |
| #8 (40-44) | - | 50 |

Total - 356

This runner's 356 points would be compared to other runner's total points in the 40-44 age group. Prior to completing the fourth race in the new age division, this runner's points would continue to be considered in the 35-39 age group, even though some were scored in the 40-44 division.

6. The current 10 race maximum would continue to apply with points in additional races "replacing" any previous lower scoring races. No minimum number of races would be necessary.

7. Race directors would be awarded first place points in both the age category applicable on race day as well as in the open category.

8. Annual points standing awards should be coordinated with the award and race structure to be utilized for the points races during the year. The exact definition of the relationship should probably be the subject of a separate discussion.

This system would continue to reward both participation in more races as well as higher finishes. It would eliminate the need to maintain points information throughout the year for many runners who do not now finish in the top 50/30 of their respective age divisions in other than small races. It would also eliminate the second counting system to determine track club finish as opposed to actual finish.

Also, the revised system would eliminate the present disincentive to "participate" in points races. Presently, if a runner is concerned about the points standings, he/she will not run a race just for fun because the results may have a negative impact. Though arguments can be made about reasons for individual motivation, the system itself should encourage maximum participation rather than present obstacles to it.

TORCH RUN
By Rick Reitzug

We ran a hard 7, through the huge, picturesque park. Afterwards we jogged over to the zoo and, being experts at finding open gates by this time, succeeded once again. We took a walking, jogging tour of the zoo which was a lot of fun. We made it back to the hotel with time to spare. It had been an enjoyable morning.

Our St. Louis ceremony had gotten botched up. We were supposed to be doing something in conjunction with the Davis Cup finals which were being held that day, but the local official who was supposed to plan the ceremony was out of town on vacation and hadn't planned a thing. Being runners without a ceremony, we decided to head to the Checker Dome anyway and just mill about in front of the U.S. Olympic Committee Sports medicine Van which was accompanying us (staffed by Pete and Sally, two very nice Lowenbrau-loving folks and definitely not micro-Olympians). The van was an impressive looking piece of machinery, a real eye catcher and conversation starter. Unfortunately, the staff couldn't find the Checker Dome. Chuck kept telling them, "We were there this morning, and it wasn't anywhere around here." Finally, it sunk in and the "boss" wanted to know what we had been doing down there. When faced with a sticky question, a "hem" and a "haw" are often the best answer. Being preoccupied with finding the place, it was adequate for our leader this time.

We finally found the place, and, although we didn't see John McEnroe, we did draw considerable interest from the people entering the dome during our brief stay there. Some wanted to take pictures of their kids holding the lit torch in front of the Olympic van, or next to some of the runners. It would have been good publicity to remain there, but we had a ceremony scheduled in Springfield later in the afternoon and so we had to make tracks.

We were beginning to get fairly wiped out from the continual riding and running and ceremonies. It seemed as if we were either hopping into or out of the vehicles, or lugging suitcases, with bursts of running and ceremonies in between. The ceremonies were all different, all nice in their own way, some even moving. Hearing "America the Beautiful" or "The Star Spangled Banner" while holding a Sports Festival flag, with the Olympic Flame burning in the foreground definitely is a patriotism-evoking experience. But, in our wiped out state, it was taking us longer and longer to work up enthusiasm at the beginning of each of our runs. We knew we were ambassadors for the Sports Festival and the U.S. Olympic movement, but we were getting tired! The knowledge of our "duty" usually did get us going after several miles and we generally ended up after a run standing around for awhile just finishing conversations that we'd started with the local runners during our run.

Springfield had a very nice ceremony planned, with band and all, so that helped to shake us out of our doldrums somewhat. Springfield was also my turn to be "media star". A reporter from one of the local radio stations interviewed me. I don't remember many of the questions that he asked me, but I do recall him asking what I thought about while running. I answered by telling him that a lot of times I just looked at the scenery, from the magnificent beauty of the Rockies to the vastness of the Kansas flatlands. It was something I had discovered. We do live in a very beautiful country. Even the endless miles of flat, flat land in eastern Colorado and western Kansas, with not even a tree to break the vastness, even that is beautiful in its immenseness. I had traveled these same roads many years previously, as a child and young adolescent, "forced" to go with my parents on our annual vacation to the mountains. But it was not until this trip that I gained a first hand appreciation of this beautiful creation, the United States.

After finishing in Springfield, we headed to Decatur, Illinois, where we were spending the night. Once again the genuine hospitality of the American people came forth. The Decatur running club had planned a cook-out for us at state representative and running club member, John Dunn's house. Each of us had been assigned our own personal host for the evening. The food was plentiful and delicious, the people friendly and enthusiastic - it certainly left us with a good impression of Decatur.

Day XI

This was to be our last big day of running. We would be in Chicago by nightfall, basically the end of our leg of the Torch Run. We were starting today from the parking lot of our Holiday Inn. I had once again started the morning with a big breakfast (a huge Belgium waffle with fruit and whipping cream) and once again faced the prospect of running with a full stomach. Our hosts from the previous evening would be joining us at various points along our route, each according to his or her ability, for the run to the softball stadium, the site of our Decatur ceremony. We enjoyed friendly conversations with the personable Decatur runners enroute and then listened to several speakers at the stadium, including the mayor who effusively praised the national champion Decatur softball team. The team was to participate in the Sports Festival and were lined up behind us on the ball diamond. After the ceremony they would be playing an all-star team from their league. We left the stadium and, several miles down the road, the last of their runners. We accelerated and ran our last mile out of Decatur at a good clip. It felt good to stretch out the legs after all our slow running. I believe it was in Decatur that our torch expert, Larry Reynolds, got down from his perch on the back bumper of the "bomb squad" van and ran with the torch for several hundred yards. Earlier, in Topeka, Jan Frick, our medical technician, had also taken a turn with the torch. Larry and Jan both had important duties on our trip. Larry constantly monitored the torch, which had a tendency to blow out on windy days (no, the flame that was carried into Indianapolis had not been kept burning continuously since Pike's Peak). I'm amazed that Larry survived the trip without burned hands or a burned face - although he did singe his eyebrows several times. He seemed to be oblivious to the danger of thrusting a hand or face over the often clear-burning torch to see if it was actually still lit.

Although most of us did not require medical attention during the trip, it was comforting to know that Jan's medical attention was available if needed. Two runners did require Jan's expert touch. Our first casualty occurred during a post-Pike's Peak picture-taking session. Our photographer (and FAC-MAN i.e. Food and Accommodations director) was lining us up for a group shot at the Olympic Center. Suddenly, a faint voice was heard saying, "I'm going to faint" and an instant later a green-faced David Widmer, blended in with the grass. Jan quickly revived Dave and the temporary scare was over. Jan's second assignment was not completed so quickly. Dr. Lee Dye, a Pike's Peak Marathon veteran, twisted his ankle a mere quarter mile into our Pike's Peak descent. For the duration of the trip, the ankle required daily wrapping and Jan's frequent attention and advice on whether or not it was safe for Lee to run.

After Decatur, it was on to Champaign-Urbana where a number of wheelchair athletes and a Sports Festival speed-skating participant joined us.

It was another hot and humid day and, while the ceremony was going on Jim Fletcher wiped his sweat on a towel and passed the towel on to the next runner. I was standing on the opposite end of the line and as the towel got to me I eagerly wiped my face only to catch the not so sweet scent of the sweat of 11 different runners. That and the smell of the Colorado air are two smells I won't soon forget!

We continued from Champaign-Urbana to Kankakee. We had run 16 miles already that day and I personally had in 118 miles for the week. Luckily we were only scheduled to run 2-1/2 miles in Kankakee. Drumming up enthusiasm for the run at Kankakee was extremely difficult, especially since it was Sunday afternoon and the town was deserted. A good point of the run was that it ended at a Howard Johnson's and after the always top priority of bathroom use, we all selected our favorite flavor and licked contentedly on our ice cream cones. It was a much needed "picker-upper".

From Kankakee it was only a short drive to Chicago, but in our exhausted state it seemed as if we would never reach the Windy City. Our downtown Holiday Inn was just off the loop but far enough away to be in a really bad part of town. We were happy though, just to be finished for the day. As I struggled with my bags (they seemed to get heavier every day) and made my way into the lobby, I saw Myron hugging his grandson whom I had just met in Indianapolis the night before we began our Torch Run. Before I could figure out what he was doing in Chicago, Myron was hugging his wife, Rosie. I started thinking how nice it was of them to surprise Myron, when, out of the bar, drink in hand, walked my wife, Mary. She and Rose, and Myron's daughter and their grandchildren had all driven to Chicago to surprise us. It was so good to see Mary again! The two weeks I had been gone was the longest we'd been separated since we got married! After showering and changing, Mary and I went down to the bar to have a drink before dinner. In my exhausted, but happy, state, I poured wine all over Mary's white pants. After some frantic wiping and dabbing, we proceeded to have a good dinner (even though we were once again victims of the by now expected poor Holiday Inn service). Even that could not taint the happiness of our reunion.

Day X11

The last day. After sleeping a little later than usual (our Chicago ceremony was not until 2:00 p.m.), Mary and I weaved our way through the Loop on a three mile run during morning rush hour. Later we ate breakfast, sat around the pool, and walked back down to the Loop with Myron and Jim Fletcher. We found a department store and headed inside to find a scale in order to check our weight-- something we had been dying to do for the last few days. We all weighed about the same as we had when we left on the trip, which was amazing considering the amount of eating we'd been doing. After getting back to the Holiday Inn, we headed downtown for our ceremony. We had a short four block run to Daley Plaza. There Wilma Rudolph and Mayor Byrne were part of the ceremony. Unfortunately it all went by too quickly. The lunch hour crowds were on the streets, we had a police escort, everyone was staring at us - it really made you feel like you were some kind of hotshot!

We ended, standing on a bridge spanning the Chicago River, reluctant to get in our vehicles, realizing that we'd run our last on the torch run. We'd become a family of sorts, we'd gotten to know each other, we'd joked, poked fun, laughed, lived and complained together for the past two weeks. It had been interesting, boring, mundane, exciting. Although we had not run every step of the way from Pike's Peak to Chicago, in totaling our mileage for the Torch Run, we discovered that as a team we'd run over 1500 miles, considerably more than the 1100 mile distance between the two points. We could have run the entire way had it been allowed.

In the week to come my mind would be focused on the upcoming marathon. During the week after that I was to experience a restlessness and turn my mind to what exciting running "event" I could do next. It was great to be back home and not have to live by the schedules of 21 other people, but yet there was a slight longing for something more, for something new. It must be what a sailor feels like when he's been on dry land too long. Being at heart a quiet, retiring, domesticated person, I soon got over my wanderlust and am content to focus again on marathon PRs and the usual challenges of daily living and running.

Day XIII (and later)

After going our separate ways in Hammond (a short drive down the Interstate from Chicago) on the 12th day of our trip, we thought the torch run was over for us. However, the following week we were all notified that we were to be part of the opening ceremonies in Indianapolis. So eleven days after parting in Hammond, we once again met in Indianapolis. We had started here on July 1st, 23 days ago. Now we were finishing here on the opening day of the National Sports Festival.

The opening ceremony in Indianapolis was divided into two parts, one outdoors at the American Legion Hall in the afternoon, a second one that evening in Market Square Arena. Chris Schenkel was to be the emcee at both ceremonies with Indianapolis Mayor Hudnot, Governor Orr, Wilma Rudolph, Bob Hope, various Olympic officials and other dignitaries taking part in the ceremonies. The afternoon parade featured a parade of the participating athletes into the huge outdoor Mall, the release of balloons and doves, and, of course, the lighting of a torch, this one permanently erected at one end of the Mall. Shortly before the opening ceremony torch bearers entered the mall, we were joined by the runners who had participated in the last leg of the torch run and had just finished with a ceremony in Greenwood, Indiana, earlier that day. We had already been joined by the participants of the other state relay teams. We then were introduced as a group by Chris Schenkel and mounted the platform stage, carrying and waving our U.S. flags. It was an impressive and moving sight to look out over the wide mall, seeing the memorial statues at the far end, the thousands of spectators lining both sides, and the center of the mall almost entirely filled with the red, green, yellow, and blue uniformed athletes who were to begin competition in the Sports Festival the following day. Soon after, the two athletes from Indianapolis who were carrying the torch for this final leg appeared at the far end of the mall. They held the torch high, but no flame was visible (not an uncommon sight even when the torch is lit). As they got closer it became obvious to us trained "torch watchers" that not only was there no flame visible, there was no flame. Apparently the wind had blown it out. How were they going to light the permanent torch? Luckily someone had thought of this possibility and had a contingency plan for just such an occurrence. It was possible to light the permanent torch by having a person located in it's hollow core who flipped the appropriate switch at the appropriate moment. It worked perfectly and I'm sure that most of the thousands who witnessed the torch lighting were not even aware of the way in which it had been done. Nonetheless, it was a moving ceremony and it was good to see old friends again.

The evening ceremony in Market Square was truly an extravaganza. Bob Hope, Miss American, the release of balloons, "night-glo" candles....it was all very exciting. Our part was an experience I'll never forget. A temporary torch was wheeled out into an aisle between two sections of bleachers. We were waiting "in the wings" between the upper and lower arena. As the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra slowly played the opening strains of "Winners", the theme song of the Sports Festival written specifically for it, we walked out into the aisle that encircled the interior of the arena and lined up on both sides of the torch waving our American flags.

The crowd broke into a loud applause and rose to their feet, giving us and the symbolism involved in what we were doing a standing ovation. I had shivers running up and down my spine, goose bumps all over and adrenalin flowing like crazy. As the orchestra broke into the faster, exhilarating part of "Winners", Chuck Koeppen, holding the lit torch, burst out of the aisle next to the temporary torch and into the arena. At such a moment patriotism, camaraderie, love of running, of mankind, of the universe and of God for creating it all, come together and you feel that the impossible would be a cinch were it attempted.

As we fell in behind Chuck and the torch, I wanted to sprint, to shout, to hold my arms up. There was so much energy, excitement, electricity! We ran our lap around the arena, struggling to keep our energy checked, waving our American flags wildly at the crowd. The thought ran through my mind that if the Sports Festival can produce such excitement, what must it be to participate in some way in the Olympics?

The torch was passed to Wilma Rudolph and she lit the temporary indoor torch, again to the wild cheering and applauding of the audience. It was obvious that Indianapolis lived its Sports Festival!

Suddenly it was over, this time for good. What remained was the experience, the friendships, the memories of the joys and the excitement, the trials and tribulations of two weeks on the road across a part of this great country of ours. I had run 176 miles of our country and rode a thousand more. The miles left me with memories of a country and a people that are beautiful both in their magnificence and in their plainness. And, although everything did not always go smoothly on the trip, it was a good trip. The memories will always be fond ones.

Ms. Barbara Wigham
Vice President for Programming and Promotion
WPTA -TV

Dear Ms. Wigham:

I am very disappointed that WPTA chose, for the second consecutive year, not to televise live the ABC network coverage of the New York City Marathon broadcast this morning. That such live coverage is of interest to runners is obvious. Figures I shared with you last year, as reported by ABC, indicated that 75% of their network affiliates carried the telecast, representing a 15% share of the market or 11½ million viewers.

I am equally disappointed that WPTA chose to broadcast their tape-delay telecast at 1:30 pm on October 24 -- when the Home Loan 10,000 meter race was scheduled to be run at 2:00 pm. Surely you are aware that a large percentage of your audience for this delayed broadcast would be drawn from among the runners in the area -- most of whom will be at the race this afternoon. Those viewers who are interested in watching a marathon broadcast are not interested in the "news value" but in the drama of the race. The drama will be there whether the race is shown at 1:30 or 10:30 pm. Perhaps the religious programming could be shown on a tape-delay basis at 1:30 in the afternoon?

Although WPTA's coverage of local running events tends to be better than that of your competitors in town, I am beginning to question WPTA's interest in local runners as a result of this programming decision.

Sincerely yours,

s/ David Fairchild

Dear Mr. Fairchild

Your recent comments about our delayed scheduling of the New York City Marathon have been brought to my attention.

As a member of the ABC Affiliates Board of Governors, let me assure you that the coverage of this event has been the subject of many discussions between ABC Sports and the affiliate stations. Except for the five television stations owned and operated by the network, almost every affiliate is committed under long term contracts to carry religious programming on Sunday mornings until noon. And historically, the television audience has grown to expect those religious programs of their choice to remain constant in place, not subject to disruption by special interest programs.

Poor clearance of the 1981 New York City Marathon was discussed in meetings with the network and ABC Sports last December. The affiliate stations suggested that better clearance could be achieved by moving the start of the marathon to an early afternoon (NYT) time. The matter was tabled with ABC Sports promising to seek this alternative, an alternative that was apparently not acceptable to the sponsors of the event. It may be of interest to you that out of 208 affiliate stations, only 116 cleared (live or delayed tape) the 1981 New York Marathon. This past Sunday 169 affiliate stations cleared, most of them on tape delayed basis.

When it became evident the event would be delivered to us at 9:30 am (Fort Wayne time) we had no choice but to stand by our earlier position, and to offer a delayed broadcast at a more convenient time for our total viewing audience. At the same time, the local sponsor of the 10,000 metre run was made aware of the conflict with the New York event. This was done earlier in the year when the date for the local event could have been rescheduled.

Through all of the above dialogue, first with ABC Sports and later with the sponsor of the local event, we believe our case has been stated succinctly and fairly. Further, we believe we have been fair in our assessment of the problem and have offered acceptable alternatives. We neither can, nor will do more.

We doubt whether you will find the above information acceptable; it is nonetheless honest and it will continue to be our position.

Cordially,

s/ Ed. Metcalfe, President & Gnl Mngr WPTA
